The Courier notes that on the 28th alto. Dr. S. Wells Williams, secretary of the U. S. Legation, left Shanghai with his family for Peking. On the previous night before he went on board. the band of the United States flag-ship Hartford assembled round Doctor Williams quarters at the Presbyterian Mission Press. and seranaded bin, winding up with the well known trang "Should suld sequeint. instance will be answered with emphatic "No," by all who have the good fortune to know the oldest inhabitant" among foreigners in China. When Dr. Williams went on board the Shanse, the Hartford dressed ship, and fired in his honor a sulute suitable to his official rank.

The above paper adds :- It will interest many of our readers to know that Dr. Williams, the day before he left, completed the main portion of his new Dictionary of the Chinese language, which embodies the results of his Chinese studies for forty years. The greatest care bas been bestowed on its typographical arminge. ment and accuracy, and it has been partly electrotyped, partly stereotyped, being, if we mistake not, the first work of any importance printed by the help of these processes in China. It extends to whout 1,150 pages of three columned quarto, and gives explanations of 12,500 goodly volumes in the hands of the public work synchronises happily with the reported settlement of the Andrence Question, as it is understood that the Hon. Mr. Low, United States Minister at Peking, remained at his post only until that question should be settled, and that very shortly after Dr. Williams arrives in about the Yamans, who give out false accounts cotton cloth are staple products. Peking, Mr. Low will avail bimself of his leave of absence, obtained at the beginning of the year, and Dr. Williams will resume his oft held position of Charge d'Affaires, if, indeed, be does not receive the appointment of Minister. The above paper contains the following warning, which may be useful :- Captain and officers of ships bringing coals to Shanghai for the first time, are probably not aware that the whole fraternity of coal merchants, brokers, godown men, &c., have an ingenious method of so altering the pivot of the weighing beam as that it takes a considerable percentage over the weight to depress the scale. It is stated on good authority that the native keeper of a coalgodown in Hongkow retired some years ago, bonsting that he had cleared Tla. 20,000 by this ingenious adaptation of the centre of gravity. We hope the issue of the present case will be to put a check upon the " little game."

The death of Chief-Justice Chase removes. another member of that celebrated Administration which conducted the American Civil War to its successful issue. Though Mr. Chase did not like Mr. Stanton and Mr. Seward, who both died liefore him, remain in office till the notual close of the war, his place in the history of the United States will he chiefly determined by his three years' adminof prodigious labour, and possessed of a confidence in his own opinion and a courage in carrying out his policy which were akin to rashwounded, on payment of the amount above ness. The state of the Republic when Mr. Lincoln came to power called for these qualities in its statesmen, and the success of the war probably arose in great degree from Mr. Lincoin's ability to select as subordinates men whom no labour could tire and no danger frighten. His first occupation was that of a schoolmaster; but while he was teaching the sons of Henry Clay and William Wirt, and other celebrated Americane, he was biniself studying for the Bar under Mr. Wirt himself, In the year 1830 he settled at Cincinnati, where he resided during the greater part of his professional life. An edition of the Statutes of the State of Obio first brought him into notice, and ensured him a valuable practice. In 1846 he was associated with Mr. Seward as Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steambout Co.'s counsel for the defendant in the celebrated case of Von Zandt, before the Supreme Court. He | was already in politics, and was known as an active, and even leading member of the National Liberty party of those days. He was, in fact, one of the founders and the most eloquent and devoted advocates of the Free Soil party whose final triumph in the election of Mr. Lincoln broke the domination of the South over the North, and drove the Slave States into rebellion. In 1849, he was elected by the Ohio Legislature to the Senate of the United States. and he speedily took the lead in opposing all Legislation which had for its object the extension or strengthening of slavery. When the Nebraska-Kansas Bill came before the Senate, he not only moved amendments on it, but wrote appeals to the people against it, which opened the eyes of the nation to its true character. As an opponent Sze-hop-chun to local trader. of Mr. Pierce's Administration, and its proslavery supportors, he was in 1855 elected Governor of Ohio; and was afterwards re-elected by the largest vote ever cust for a Governor in | mow-tye to travelling trader. that State. When Mr. Lincoln came into power he naturally called Mr. Chase to his coupsels. and had no reason to regret the choice of his Secretary of the Treasury. Having resigned his post a few months before Mr. Lincoln's reelection, he was, in December, 1864, appointed Chief Justice of the United States; and in this capacity still showed his interest in the questions which had occupied his life, by accepting the Presidency of the Charitable Commission which looked after the welfare of the freedmen. He took the Radical side in the disputes which followed the war; and advocated the immediate bestownl of the soffrage on the emancipated slaves. It was his duty to preside over the Senate on the occasion of the trial of President Johnson on his impeachment by the House of Representa-In all his decisions in the Supreme Court he stood firmly by the principles which he had always maintained to be those of the American Constitution—those of equal rights for all, and the binding nature of public contracts. He seemed, indeed, during the chief part of his life, not to be ambitious of the Presidency. In 1856 the Ohio deputation to the National Republican Convention proposed bis name as a candidate, and it met with considerable support, but was withdrawn at own resquest. In 1864 a party which was opposed to Mr. Lincoln's re-election offered him a nomination as its candidate; but he declined it, as inconsistent with his duty to his chief. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

MOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new fords which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exerciscs for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are make the Chinese and English type correspond lerie de ce Consulat. in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. HOTOGRAPHER To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Obaimers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst H. I. H. THE GRAND DUKE ALEXIS O this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published; the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Extracts. THREE HAPPY SOULS. U, rare, sweet day of June! What is it gives To thy dear rapture a diviner power It is that I have seen three happy souls, All in the fleeting of a single hour. One was a maiden, with forgreaching sense

Feeling amid the lustre of ber hair The fragrant blossoms of that wifely crown Which, when June days are longest, she And all her thoughts were going to and fro,

And building from that blessed day and hour A nest wherein her heart already sang

One-was a mother, and her babe, new-born,

Something that had no need of words to tell The mystic menning it would fain impart. She understood. God had revealed bimself Once more, as in the manger-nest of old? She, too, had seen the Father, full of graco-Did even then Him to her bosom hold.

And these were happy. But the happiest Was one who waited for a voice to say : " Friend, come up higher." Fearing only this That he might be too willing to obey. For pain bad worked on him its perfect will, And wenned him quite from all our earthly

And it was joy to think of rest at last And the long quiet of the heavenly days, Murmured his heart: "My beautiful, my Paul's Magazine.

O, think not that with fanbies sweet and fond He cheated his poor heart to false repose Our bravest hopes are shadows vague and cold Of better things the Spirit only knows. The child shall grow apace; the bridal wreath Shall win a costlior beauty and perfume ; While he whom we call dead shall work and Samson the incombed luxuriance of his giant | Current Rates. locks. And Anderson, unlike many popular idols, rose to eminence not in consequence, but in spite of his defects. Yet these defects and occasional extravagances provoked a good deal of criticism; more, however, of a genial than of an ill-natured kind. Some attached to his name the soubriquet of "Daft Willie Anderson." A good story, too, goes of an English traveller, who, stopping of a Sunday in an inn near John-street, inquired at the ostler, "Have you any crack preachers in, Glasgow?" "What's your wull?" rejoined the man, rubbing his head; "crack what, sir?" "Oh, crack preachers!" replied the bagman; in a large city like this there must be some crack preacher or other.". "1 dinna ken what ye mean, sir, by crack preachers, but if ye want to hear a crackit ane, you have just to step in yonder," pointing to Anderson's church. Crackit or not, daft or wise, our brave-hearted divine persevered; bore the laughter; did the good; retorted the shalts of scorn; resisted, too, the enervating influences of popularity; outlived his own faults; and reared at last a basis for his reputation which has not since been shaken. -From "Life of Dr. Anderson," by George Gilfillan.

LORD LETTON'S WOMEN. Lord Lytton, with all his gifts, did not possess that of drawing women. It is rare among men-almost, if not quite, as rare as women, though the failure in the one case is very much less remarked upon, and less noticeable indeed, from the fact that women have but lately come to occupy leading places in works of fiction. A beautiful and sweet abstraction of womankind, with hair, eyes, throat, etc., nicely put in, with smiles and tears handy, and a few pretty speeches, is all cent off the above rates will be allowed to Inthat is really necessary for a heroine of the surers. good old-fashioned type. Lord Lytton has two of these types, the heroic and the gentle, as indeed Sin Walter also had; and most novelists of eminence keep within these safe lines. The sentimental aplandour of Violante, the sugary sweetness of Helen, may dazzle the basty reader; but how to come to any sort of realization of these young women, we are unable to inform him. Every mortal man has his tether, and here is one region in which Lord Lytton's tether is apparent, though he does his best by glowing diction and lavish sentiment to throw glamour in Above I month, our eyes and blind us to the fact. GEORGE ELIOT AND SIR WALTER sonal -Blackwood's Magazine.

We may look upon "Middlemarch" as the most remarkable work of the ablest of living noyelists, and, considered as a study of character, as unique, without being blind to the existence in it of evident and even glaring defects. First among these defects, and more conspicuous, we think, in "Middlemarch" than it any of her previous novels, is a certain want of enthusiasm in the writer. which tells very seriously upon the reader, on behalf of the parrative she has to relate. She does not write, like the great names among her predecessors, for the sake of the on reasonable terms. story, she feels none of the zest with which. in some degree Dickens and Thackeray, in greater degree Fielding and Goldsmith, above all, Scott, lose themselves in the current on which toss the chances of their heroes, and into which the strained attention of their readers is absorbed. And those old fashioned and simple novels were more perfect and complete | TN conformity with the Special Resolutions as works of art. They gratified and invigorated : one went from them as from the dinary Meetings of Shareholders held on the contemplation of some classic example of lat and 15th instants, altering Clauses Nos. 130, Greek statuary, or of some well-preserved painting by a serene Venetian master with a delightful sensation of improved taste and satisfied fancy. But George Eliot has none | Two-thirds (2/3rds) to all contributors, wheof Walter Scott's passion for, to use his own phrase, his "occupation as a romancer." "Middlemarch" will leave all of us, in greater or less measure, restless and dis-

chapten; the "finale" repeats the sad note of the " prelade." - Quarterly Review.

HAIR DRESSES. Women usually like something which gives them height, piquancy, and, above all conspicuousness. They are not to be blamed for this. A woman's role is to attract, and when she has attracted to enchant. But in following this aim too zealously she often outruns the scent by a long way, after the fashion of young and inexperienced hounds. A woman ought never to forget that sometimes in gaining a little she loses much As, for instance, when the hair a few years ago was turned up with a sweep, and the bonnet dwindled to a tuft, every woman gladly threw aside the "curtain" which had Sweet songs of bome and love's eternal shielded her throat from the sun, and every woman lost her white neck. Again, when a little hat was worn like a round target Lay on her arm and marmared 'gainet her against a mountain, wonten said they were going to shade their eyes, but in reality they only sacrificed the whole of the forehead and eyebrows (usually the best part of the face) to the most unmeaning saucer that ever rested on a snub. The Normans brought in the fashion of long plaits of hair, reaching to the hips, and sometimes bound with rib. bons or incased in silk of various colors-a pretty fashion, but one that made some additional head-dress requisite. Soon after ap pear the strange head-dresses which we must discuss in detail, and wherein we may see how the simplicity and utility of the earlier times that had so much beauty in them, had given place to a vain craving after mere The maiden love had found, the mother life; beauty, which grew less and less as the fair He had found both in finding death alone: wearers sacrificed more and more convenience, And, so the bridegroom murmurs to the bride, sonse, and propriety in its pursuit. -St. Insurances.
